Transmigration of souls, sometimes called metempsychosis, is based on the idea that a soul may pass out of one body and __17__ in another, human or animal, or in an inanimate object. The idea appears in various forms in tribal cultures in many parts of the world. The notion was familiar in ancient Greece, and was adopted in a philosophical form by Plato. The belief gained some __18__ in gnostic and occult forms of Christianity and Judaism and was introduced into Renaissance thought by the recovery of the Hermetic books.

While its most fully __19__ doctrine is to be found in Hinduism, the idea of transmigration of souls has been __20__ in the Western world by movements such as theosophy and by the more recent increase of Oriental religious cults.

IV. Short Essay Writing: (20%)

Please write a brief responsive essay of about 250-300 words to the passage below to show your creative interpretation and/or evaluation of it.

It's a classic generational argument, but statistics seem to be pointing to a disturbing fact—that today's twentysomethings are the first generation to be less successful than their parents. For one thing, more and more young people are returning home after college, unable to find a job or pay for an apartment, let alone buy a house or start a family, which are, in many ways, the hallmarks of adult life.
