A family 41 in the Scottish Borders are advertising for a new 42 nanny, and they're offering a hefty pay check—£50,000 a year—for the right candidate to 43 a five-year-old and a seven-year-old and live in what the parents describe as a "lovely, spacious, historic property with spectacular views." There is, however, a slight catch: the house is supposedly haunted.

"We 44 in our home for nearly 10 years," the mother of the family writes in the advert, which appears on Childcare.co.uk. "We were told it was 'haunted' when we bought it, but kept our minds open and decided to buy the house 45. Five nannies have left the role in the last year, each citing 46 incidents as the reason, including strange noises, broken glass and furniture moving. This has obviously been a period of great upheaval for our children. We haven't personally experienced any such happenings, as they have been reported only while we've been out of the house, but we're happy to pay above the asking rate, and feel it's important to be as 47 as possible to find the right person."

Richard Conway, CEO of Childcare.co.uk, said, "When we saw the advert we were stunned. Some of the guys at the headquarters were 48 but after talking to the family and their previous 49 we realized it was a genuine position. The family has assured us that no harm has come to anyone in the house; however, the nanny will have to have a strong 50."
