Section 4. Reading Comprehension 10%: Read the passage and answer the questions.

In recent years, the importance of emotional intelligence (EI) in education has become a focus for researchers and educators alike. Emotional intelligence refers to a person's ability to understand, manage, and express their own emotions while being able to recognize and empathize with the emotions of others. It goes beyond academic skills, emphasizing the human side of education.

When teachers prioritize emotional intelligence, they create classrooms that are supportive and nurturing. In these environments, students feel valued, respected, and understood. This sense of belonging can significantly enhance students' motivation to learn and their overall academic performance.

Additionally, fostering emotional intelligence equips students with vital interpersonal skills, such as effective communication, teamwork, and conflict resolution. These skills are important for personal and professional success later in life. For example, a student who learns to empathize with peers is more likely to form positive relationships and work well in teams.

By integrating emotional intelligence into teaching strategies, educators help students develop not only academic knowledge but also emotional flexibility and social awareness. This holistic approach prepares students to navigate the complexities of the modern world, making emotional intelligence a cornerstone of education for the 21st century.

26: What does emotional intelligence primarily focus on?

- a) Highlighting academic facts and results
b) Physical endurance and training
c) Managing one's emotions and understanding others' emotions
d) Ignoring emotional challenges and difficulties

27: Why do supportive classrooms improve learning outcomes?

- a) They reduce competition.                      b) They discourage interpersonal interactions.
c) They focus only on academic results.                      d) They make students feel valued and respected.
